Enviro Tool Kit

On-Demand access to Hundreds of Compliance Education Resources

Overview

Environmental compliance has been major responsibility for many organizations since the creation of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in 1970. The EPA is important to any organization that generates, transports, treats, stores or disposes hazardous waste, emits contaminants into the air, or discharges pollutants into the water. Many businesses find environmental rules to be complex and difficult to understand.

What makes environmental compliance even more difficult, is that many states have adopted their own compliance rules, which can be more comprehensive than the federal rules. For example, most states now impose stricter requirements for chemical reporting, facility siting, asbestos abatement, and air and water discharge limits.

You need 24/7 access to resources that stay on-top of these ever-changing state and federal requirements, such as RCRA, CERCLA, CAA, CWA and hazardous waste. Our Enviro Tool Kit puts practical regulatory analyses, activity information, news, and critical compliance tools at your fingertips.
